

AQUATICS CENTER FOR EXCELLENCE

“There is a direct link between racial justice and water safety because often times, it’s communities of color that don’t have access to public pools and pools in general, and many New York City children of color don’t know how to swim as a result.”

- Council Member Shekar Krishnan, Council District 25 (Jackson Heights, Elmhurst & Woodside, Queens)

THE CHALLENGE

Drowning is one of the most urgent and preventable public health issues of our time. The crisis is exacerbated in communities of color due to a lack of access to swim instruction and a shortage of trained lifeguards.

THE Y’S SOLUTION

The Y established the Aquatics Center of Excellence (ACE) in 2021 to provide a comprehensive approach to scaling swim safety efforts throughout the five boroughs through three primary objectives:

1. Provide greater access to swim safety instruction, particularly in lower-income communities of color.
2. Build the lifeguard and swim instructor pipeline through free Lifeguard Training & Certification (LTC) courses.
3. Establish citywide aquatics advocacy.

THE URGENT NEED

In summer 2024, seven people drowned in NYC public waters, the majority of whom were people of color. As we look towards next summer, timing is critical to offer more life-saving swim instruction to youth, particularly in disadvantaged communities.

AQUATICS CENTER FOR EXCELLENCE PROGRAMMING

SWIM SAFETY: Studies show that one in four NYC high school students cannot swim; outcomes are more dire for children in communities of color. Through ACE, the Y is expanding aquatics programming to increase access to swim safety skills in high-need communities, predominantly in low-income communities of color. School-based swim programs pair DOE Schools with Y branches to provide swim lessons for young people during their physical education period.

LIFEGUARD TRAINING & CERTIFICATION PROGRAM: Nationwide, there were approximately 31,000 fewer lifeguards, and other recreational protective service workers in 2020 than in 2018. The Lifeguard Training & Certification program seeks to reverse this trend on a local scale by recruiting, training, and certifying NYC lifeguards and swim instructors.

CITYWIDE INTERORGANIZATIONAL AQUATICS TASK FORCE: Initiated and co-chaired by the Y, the task force convenes key stakeholders from across New York City to develop short- and long-term solutions to achieve greater alignment in citywide aquatics policies and to collectively advocate for increased government support to improve the aquatics ecosystem.
